Lovers Meeting.

She was a thing to love—And her two little eyes had not less than me—a curse At first!

There was a beauty on her white, uplifted brow;

Amid the smiling light of glossy curls, As at the shore of innocence and Love,

Had cast down, from out its azure home,

And made its soft nest there!

But then! O, they were whiter than the ocean's.

Terms indeed small they were,

And came from out a pair of ruby lips—

And tempestuous lips I ever saw; for her's—

It was a tiny, rosebud kind of mouth,

And moist with amorous dew;

And parting kiss—

The soft kiss that锚 Anchore himself—

The soft kiss that锚 all the lux of earthly kind

He would have quit his head's—indeed, he would—

And left him to do his wage—

Her heart beat wildly with love;

And kept her, her small, professed look,

Resting upon the floor: It was a tiny rest, much too small, I thought,

To make such rumples on the floor.

Her little ivory fingers, blue-vineyard, and taperdites, with rose petals, were twining now,

And dishevelled hair, and gleaming

A star upon a swelled wave;

A star, from India, shone on her breast;

It was a fitting time to sell my eye——Rudolphus, Rudolphus! (why comes he not?)

Set in the air, a cooling wind,

Her sweet lips murmured this—when,

Suddenly, the youth was by her side—

Her white arms yoked around his neck;

Her mouth "was glued to his—her full,

Sweet, sweet flood of rapture was too great;

Fugle thing—embosomed in his manly arms.

So secretly had she seemed, that he,

Left his heart to beat,

Let that disturb her deep—delections

Taste of love!

Long was she pillow'd then upon his heart;

And burningly intense the gaze that He laid upon her downy cheek;

Finally, her eyes opened wide,

And then she said—"Dear Rudolph, I am thou;"

And closed again the homely orbits;

And heath the sun fringe that veiled

These eyes of love, no shades cover—

The soft sun had kissed the hills with gold,

And wrapped in soft, voluptuous clouds,

Had cast to rest; and Rudolph set

This Earth not for fruit Heaven!"

HOPE.

BY JAMES R. WILLIAMS.

What effect hope displays on the mind!

"Tis a source of sincere happiness;

Tho' it oft to slight prospects concerned,

It succeeds in removing distress.

Animates and consoles sinking hearts;

Consolation it whispers to all;

And a blessing to all it imparts,

For it is no respecter at all.

O! thou wonderful creature of fear

Then thou art bent beneath fear's command,

Say what it is that comes to thy hand?

Telling thee that triumph is at hand?

Take away or abstract from the rest,

This true gift, leaving grief also fear,

(Quite momentous their weight,) O, thou breast!

What remains within thee but despair?

Thus in mis'ry's deep cup—dread of all,

There is blended a soothing solace;

Sole supporter, when from fortune we fall,

The great light that illumines life's dark space.

The Cincinnati Enquirer says:

As Nicholas Longworth, esq., was sitting on the steps of a drinking-house on Third street, with his hat between his knees, waiting for a friend, a gentlemen, a stranger, passed, and saying

"old Nick's" ordinary garnish rather troubled countenance, supposed him to be one of the professional mendicants that often congregate there, and as he went by, dropped a quarter into the hat. "Old Nick" perceived the mistake too late to rectify it, and pocketed the coin with a peculiar smile. The idea of mistaking the Cincinnati Cra-sus—one of the richest men in America, worth probably from $5,000,000 to $20,000,000—for a street beggar is rather odd, though not unnatural, as any one to look at the old gentleman and his extremely shabby dress would not suppose his available means at the out-quiet of that awful reckoning. Speak of no fading memories of affection whose objects perished in their love-like the flowers of spring, or winter in slow decay. Talk not of an early home where loved ones linger and looked around the room. But they did not speak a word to each other as they hastened along. After going a distance of several blocks, they stepped before a house, over the door of which hung a handsome ornamental gas lamp, bearing the words, "Oysters an Refreshments."

They did not speak a word to each other as they hastened along. After going a distance of several blocks, they

stepped before a house, over the door

of which hung a handsome ornamental

gas lamp, bearing the words, "Oysters

an Refreshments."

It was a strange place for two little girls to enter, and at such an hour; but after standing a moment, they pushed against the green door, which turned lightly upon its hinges, and stepped in to a large and brilliantly lighted bar room.

"Bless us!" exclaimed a man who sat reading. "Here are those babies again."

Ady and Jane stood near the door, and looked around the room. But they did not see the objects of their search, and going up to the bar, they said timidly to a man who stood behind it, pouring liquor into glasses:

"Has papa been here to-night?"

The man leaped over the bar until his face was close to the children, when he said in an angry way:

"I don't know anything about your father. And here don't you come here anymore. If you do, I'll call my big dog out of the yard and make him bite you."

Ady and Jane felt frightened, as well by the harsh manner as the angry words of the man, and started back from him, and were turning towards the door with sad faces, when the person who had first marked their entrance, called out loud enough for them to hear:

"Conjure you to rise superior to this deadly foe. Reward those dear chilren with the highest blessing of their hearts, like the flowers of spring, or winter in slow decay. Talk not of an angry fate, and weeping eyes. But let me tell you, the joys of the earth are not so great as the joys of the heavenly world."

Ady and Jane stood silent still on the check of affection!

and let not the wailing of grief break the solemn silence of the death scene.

Let it gather the accents that come from the dark shadows of eternity, saying to it come home. A farman, a stranger, passed, and saying

"old Nick's" ordinary garnish rather

troubled countenance, supposed him to be one of the professional mendicants

FEDERALIST.—
I Haven't another word to say—I never dispute with fools."

Now, you are very sure to agree with them.

"That's the rock on which I split," said Charly to his wife, when she asked him to rock the cradle.

Mrs. PARTINGTON desire to know why the captain of a vessel can't keep a memorandum of the weight of his anchor, instead of weighing it every time he leaves port?

The original of Power's "Greek Slave" has been sold, in London, to the Duke of Cleveland for 1,800 guineas ($8,000).

Good company and good conversation are the sine qua non of virtue.

TIME wears slippers of list, and his tread is a duster. The day comes softly dawning, one after another; they creep in at the windows; their fresh morning air is grateful to the lips that listen to it until, before we know it, a whole life of days has possession of the citadel, and time has taken us for its result of self-delusion.

A LEARNED bird, speaking of the salary attached to a rammed appointment to a new judgeship, said it was all moonshine. Lord Lyndhurst, in his dry, sarcastic way remarked, "May it so, but I have a strong notion that, moonshining though it be, you would like to see the first quarter of it."

THIS AND, I must have some change to day!

"Well, stay at home and take care of the children; that will be change enough, anyhow."

Two young ladies bathing near New York on Friday, were carried out of their depth. One of them was drowned. The other, with great presence of mind, refrained from struggling, floated upon her back, and though being in the water for more than an hour, was very little exhausted when rescued.

HOW TO REACT: PRINCE EDWARD PAINT.—When anybody faints, instead of making a noise or dashing water upon him, lay him at full length on his back on the floor, loosen his clothing, push the crowd away so as to allow the air to reach him, and let him alone. The philosophy of a fainting fit is, the heart fails to send the proper supply of blood to the brain. If the person is erect, that blood has to be thrown up hill; but if lying down, it has to be projected horizontally. Which requires less power, is apparent.

SMALL faults indulged, are like thieves which let in greater.

SORRY is dangerous to reason without being favorable to virtue.

WEAR your learning like your watch, in a private pocket, and don't pull it out to show that you have one but if you are asked what o'clock it is, tell it.

A TRULY grateful heart may not be able to tell its gratitude, but it can feel, and love, and act.

"MADAM, has your piano an Italian attachment?" asked Stubb, the other night, of the wife a man who appeared to live fully up to it not beyond his means. "Hush!" whispered Stiggins in his ear; it has a Shylockian Stubb dropped the subject.

"Who is that lovely girl?" said the witty Lord Norbury, in company with his friend, Cresswell Grant. "Mrs. Miss Glass' boy-friend," I should often be interrogated, "I once had such a glass to my eye," said Nebury.

A surgeon was dedicated to Spirit Island, Michigan, on the 1st of June. Sixteen hundred persons were present.

BARDEN says that chloroform was administered in thirty thousand cases in the French army in the Crimea without any fatal accident from it.

There is as much eloquence in the tone of the voice, in the look, and in gesture of an orator, as his language.

WISH to take as much pains to let what we ought to be, as we do to distinguish what we really are, we might appear like cowards, without being at the trouble of any disguise.

DID we not flatter ourselves, the flatness of others would never hurt us; for flatness is a sort of bad money to which our vanity only gives currency.

WHAT is the difference between a bachelorette and a young lady? The former hates to dress while the latter desires to kill.

AN Irishman, who had been with his master in the kitchen, said: "Pat, what is the law I hear the master talking about?" "Study a drop of the master," was Pat's witty reply.

HUMILITY is the first lesson we learn from reflection, and self-distrust the last proof we give of having obtained a knowledge of ourselves.

JONES, in a dilemma, said that he was at his wit's end. Smith earnestly remarked that it would not take him long to return—he had not come far.

What is a bachelorette? A genteel fair hand to shake.

JACK, your wife is not so popular as she used to be." "No, she has lost her looks, and turned—expensive."

A returned Pilgrim says he had poor days in the flesh of his dog. Very disagreeable dogs they must have been!

A fool never admires himself so much as when he has committed some folly.

If a man attack my opinions, I print do you think I would reply? Not I. Do you think I don't understand what my friend the Professor, long ago called the "dystrophic paroxysm of the brain?" I'll tell you. I am sure that he had a long talk, one arm of which was the right wing stem, and the other big enough to hold the noon, water would stand at the same height in one as in the other. Controversy equates odds, and wise men in the same way, and the bold know it.

The position of the dead in the field of battle.—Says the London Medical Times: While travelling the banks of the Magdalene, I had formerly seen the remains with respect to Russian soldiers that there must not only be killed, but thrown down, was brought to mind. A great number of the killed, in fact, remained in the attitude they were in on receiving their death blow. Those who had died from injuries in the head usually fell with their face to the ground, and were disengaged the old British Preacher with complete resolution of the limbs. In those wounded in the head, death, though rapid, is not instantaneous, and the body is kept in life by a strong current which holds it in the position of a bayonet charge; his energetic force projects forward, with the menacing attitude of a dead lion. Not far off, as a contrast, lay an Austrian who had died of hemorrhage, and in his agony he had lost his strength, and his eyes had fallen out of his sockets. They were stuck in his muscles, which held him in the position of a bayonet charge; his energetic force projects forward, with the menacing attitude of a dead lion. Hellebore Piles.—A disease with a name. How often do we see persons gradually going away, without any distinct indications of disease? They grow more feeble day by day, their old age declines, they lose all interest in business, and with lack-lustre eyes and cadaverous complexions move mechanically from place to place, the very impersonations of hopeless misery. For want of a better name we might call it, or perhaps, now learned weakness and debility. Now learn it by my, in all cases be sure, A. H. Hallay's Bills will tell the truth, the sinking physical energies of the patient, rouse his whole organization to healthy action, and produce a complete revolution in his feelings as well as his frame. Their alternative and renovating properties can only be realized by those who have experienced their effects.

Waking Compound.

The mention made of this new article in our last paper having elicited considerable enquiry, verbally and by letter; we will here say in reply, that further experiment has confirmed all that has been said in its favor. The material to make the compound, cost but little. Mr. Johnson, the inventor, will either sell the receipt for making or the compound itself, and warrant it to be all that he recommends.

The combined Opposition, as shown by the result of the recent Congressional elections, will have a decided majority in the next House of Representatives; and in case of the election of the next President by the House, will have it in their power to defeat any, and every Democratic candidate. In this good news to the Southern Opposites? So it is to Northern Black Republicans. Will the defeat of the Democratic candidate, by this combined Opposition, insure the election of a Southern Opposition candidate, or even any possibility of it? No, but it will ensure the election of a Northern Black Republican, and yet the Southern Opposition rejoice with them. A few years will probably unfold to them how much they have gained or lost by aiding Black Republicanism to triumph over the only real or formidable opposition it ever had; and they then may vainly regret their present suicidal course.

A late Whig paper of Georgia, heads the news of the Congressional election in Tennessee, "Glorious News for the Opposition!" A more truthful and appropriate head would have been, "Glorious News for the Northern Black Republicans!" What have the Southern Opposition to gain by the defeat of the Southerner Democracy, unless the triumph of Black Republicanism be considered as such. But we have never heard of the Black Republicans thanking them for their aid, or even noticing them enough to give them a kick.

The Railroad bridge over the Tennessee river at Decatur, on the Memphis and Charleston road, which had from 1200 to 1500 feet destroyed by a recent tornado, was rebuilt in the incredibly short time of 14 days.

A Rail Road Convention recently assembled at Washington, composed of representatives from all the Southwestern roads, for the purpose of making a joint bid to carry the mails from Portland, Me., to New Orleans. It is said the mail will be carried in three and a half days from Washington to New Orleans.

Alabama & Tenn. River Rail Road.

We are informed that the track laying is progressing finely on this road—a large force is at work and will have the iron laid within the corporate limits of the Town of Talladega by the 10th of next month.

When the road reaches the Town of Talladega, we shall look for a large barracks, and jollification by our enterprising and liberal citizens in and near the Town. The completion of the road to Talladega, a distance from Selma of 110 miles, will be sought to be a source of great rejoicing to all. Let it come, we will try and be with you.

From Talladega to Griswold, the distance is 57 miles—out of this distance 32½ miles are graded—57 miles, partly graded—leaving only 15½ miles yet to grade. If the company had the cash to purchase the iron to complete the road, it might be finished to Griswold in 12 or 18 months.

We sincerely hope means will be raised to finish the road shortly.

Groceries—Selma Market.—Our friends who trade to Selma, and who find it most convenient and conducive to their interest to lay in their Groceries there, are respectfully referred to the advertisement of J. R. CAVETT, in another column.

From the information of business men we can safely say, that Mr. C. keeps an extensive stock of choice Groceries, and that his manner of business will always be found prompt, correct and accommodating.

Orders sent, accompanied by the cash, will be filled with articles of the finest quality ordered, and upon as good terms as upon personal application.

Rome Hardware House.—We take pleasure in referring to the advertisement of Messrs. Harper & Butler, and their very extensive Hardware House in Rome, Ga. With one of the firm, Mr. A. R. Harper, many of our readers have been well acquainted for several years, and transacted business to their most perfect satisfaction, and we have no doubt will be equally well pleased with the other. This is truly and emphatically the Hardware house, where the best and cheapest articles are sold within a hundred miles, and we sincerely hope it will retain the well merited and extensive patronage it has received from the section of country.

Drug Store, SELMA, ALA.—The business of the Drug Store of Savage & Burr is continued by G. P. Savage & Country Physician will still find this a most excellent and reliable house from which to order their supplies of pure and genuine Drugs and Medicines; and it will doubtless continue to enjoy its extensive, well earned and well-merited patronage.

Dear Father & Friends:

I am well, and have received two letters from you since I arrived here bearing dates Apr. 28th & May the 8th. I received the last one to day from you and Wm. E. Jones, which requested of me to know what it will cost to come here. I will tell something about the trip here, the cost after you get here. Climate, Growth, Soil, Provisions, Emigrants, Returners, Fire, Gold, and so on. Cost of trip from Atlanta to Leavenworth, Rail Road $16.00, Steamboat Cabin fare $2.00, or deck about $14.00; then comes the Team; it is owing to what number starts together and in what way. There were 15 of us in company, with two Wagons and four yoke of Oxen. But one yoke gave out, and we had to buy again, and pay $72.50 for each pair at Leavenworth, and our Peacocks, Tools and every thing from the time we left Atlanta till we arrived at Denver City cost us about $12,000. to the man. We had to lay by some 12 or 14 days waiting for grass. We paid us high as $2,000 per hour for corn on the Road, and we had to buy again, and pay $72.50 for each pair at Leavenworth, and our Peacocks, Tools and every thing from the time we left Atlanta till we arrived at Denver City cost us about $12,000. to the man. THE WEE BIT BIRDIE.
There was a little birdie, With a feather like father's;
All through the daisied meadows,
In the cool of evening.
He called her his wee bit birdie, For as they went along,
The hum of chitter sounded More sweet than any song.

And the blinking stars and the stillness,
And the amber swimming West, Left with wonder and feeling,
The wee bit birdie's breast.
And she prattled a hundred fancies, Calm like, quaint, and fair—She longed to be the thistle-down, And sail the evening air;

And water from the mid-way ether,
The deep green earth grow dim; Then follow the sinking sun, to break In some brightening East with him.

In an ancient forest,
To live a fairie queen,
And be served by a myriad sprites In silver suit and sheen;

And the never-fading flowers to wear That grow by the fairie wells, And over the fairie lakes that glide,
To the chiming of the musicu bells.

And to speak, and a palace should stand Where the wood-grass whistled wild, Porphyry arches, and carven pearl, Over crystal pinnas piled.

Once again he walked the meadows,
In the gloaming's golden grey,
But not the wee bit birdie came That daisy-white way.

For we suffer a will we do not ken,
And the kind mysterious powers Had changed those child-like dreams to fact.

In a higher sense than ours.

And her pulsing stream of soul had run To its main-like home afar, Beyond the light of the farthest sun And highest hanging star.

And pure blooms the wee bird wore Than in fairie world ever blos,

And a brighter than fairie crown she bore;

And a sweeter life she knew!

The Old Village Minister.

Many a reader's heart will respond in almost tearful sympathy, to the emotion under which this beautiful picture of the "Old Virginia Minister" and the Sabbath Associations of other days must have been sketched.

In an eastern paper we read a line or two the other day—the brief announcement of a death. It was in little type; it was without note or comment; only the death of the old village minister.

And so, the gray-haired man who was minister is dead; whose feet as they walked on Zion's hill, were very beautiful in our eyes. How well do we remember when the storm came up, and the sun was hidden, and cloud called out to cloud, that we wished "the minister" would come; for surely no harm could enter the dwelling that he blessed!

We used to forget about the falling sparrows; but we had faith in him, and many a time did we wonder and doubt whether he could die like other men; and whether he would not be wafted away, like the prophet of old in a chariot of fire.

Then they had not thrown away the old deacon and got one that was new;

a sleek-looking juvenile deacon with glossy black hair. The gallery was not gay with red curtains on rings, from behind which came whispers and songs; Then we had St. Martin's, St. Thomas and Mear.

Shall we ever hear Denmark and Corinth again? Sweetly rose Dundee's wild warble in those long gone days;

Old Hundred, and Wills and Petersboro—how grand they were when the breath of the great congregation went up together, and the voices of nature and maiden were blended.

How distinctly the picture rises in memory; the plain old church and the people singing before the Lord. The minister "read for their instruction" every Sabbath morning and prayed for the hands of the book and for them that were feeble and old, that God would have them all in his good keeping, guide them beside the still waters, and gather them all in the fold at last.

How much snow there used to be sprinked on the locks of the old. They tell us there's less of it now; that the children whose feet swing clear of that floor, are the men and women of to-day; and the voice of the elder is stilled, and the prayers that he uttered are ended.

They have removed the old square pulpit, as high as a house, that succeeded the swallows' nest of a pulpit, that hung there beneath a power-shaped bell that Linneus never numbered nor named. We are sorry that the old square look out between heaven and earth is removed; it was for years among the mysteries of childhood, what there might be in it;—ever an angel, and where the minister went when we could not see him. Often had we stood at the foot of the stairs that led up to mystery; but only once did we venture to ascend them. Judge of our disappointment, that there was nothing of gold there; no glories that we have read of in the Apocalypse; for we fancied there were; there were a rough, bare floor, and unchristened beam, old worn Bible, an ancient copy of Watt's Psalmsody, and a little pile of Sunday School books in a corner.

And it was thence, from the midst of such a place, these words of eloquence had come, that charmed, and thrilled, and awed us then; that sharp, and trill, and awe us in memory yet.—

We ascended the little platform, and yet standing upon tiptoe, looked over the high broad wall, upon the empty pews; there was something very grand about; we thought that almost made us breathless, and, sitting down, we left the sacred place; more scared to us than any we have seen since, save the church where the minister had sleep-ed and slept.

The members of the old congregation have gone up to better courts, and we shall see them no more. The grandmothers, in sober habit, that came tottering in with their white handkerchiefs smidly folded and laid upon their heads, the fair-browed girls that sung the alto and the airy children with the sprigs of carnation and dill; the green-hooded blossomed like an almond tree, bard by the pink door; the old woman, that in winter time brought big fat stoves for a solace, the little paper fans that waved, when day were summer like, so many little wings about the church, as if the old minister had a family of cherubs for audience; the old doxology they used to sing fast in the afternoon; the trembling benedictions like the blessings of a patriarch, they received; these we shall never see and hear again; these we

No longer in Sabbath rooms, day after the grass beneath the old poplars, and talk in tone subdued, white tanging their fingered hands; no longer do they linger near the old, gray gray-stones of the "burying ground" that is since a "cemetery"; and concerning the stone-walls that never put forth a leaf; for the times have changed and those is but one reason for it, and those who brought their dinners of old, have left the old blind man, who doubt-fully fed young, wizared girls, live now in morning light; the old black Jonah, that stood softly in, and sat humbly down in a new beside this door, has been made white at last, and hidden to come up higher.

We think it ought to be set down upon a map somewhere, that the old church was very near the "house made with hands"—only the grave-yard's breadth removed. We think it ought somewhere to be written. "The house that they builded of old—it let remain forever. Give to them the simplicity of the wall they hollowed; let the wind end the songs the dead sinners began, and the rains fall on the ephesus threshold."—Chicago Journal.

EXECUTION OF COLONEL HAYNE.

Among the distinguished men who fell victims during the war of the American Revolution, was Col. Isaac Hayne, of South Carolina; a man who, by his amability of character and high sense of honor and uprightness, had secured the good will and affection of all who knew him. He had a wife and six small children, the oldest a boy of thirteen years of age. His wife, to whom he was tenderly attached, fell a victim to disease; an event hastened, not improbably by the inconveniences and sufferings incident to a state of war, in which the whole family largely participated. Col. Hayne himself was taken prisoner by the British forces, and in a short time was executed on the gallows, under circumstances calculated to excite the deepest commiseration.
A great number of persons, both English and American, interested for his life. The ladies of Charleston signed a petition in his behalf; the mother and six small children, the oldest a boy of thirteen years of age, were sent to England, to be educated at a school there, and were supported by the kindness of friends.
